In another lifetime
You are a tree
And I am a tree
And we are wrapped around one another
In eternal embrace
Deep in a forest
Growing upwards
And downwards
Soaked in rainfall
And the wind is laughing at us.

Trees

In another lifetime
You are a tree
And I am a tree
And we are wrapped around one another
In eternal embrace
Deep in a forest
Growing upwards
And downwards
Soaked in rainfall.
And the wind is laughing at us.

NOMAD

In another lifetime
I am a mountain
And you are the sun.
I boyishly wait for you every morning
To raise your head
And you do.
And you cover me in your warmth
And I feel beautiful and important.
And together we cast shadows
Like paintings across the landscape.
I am blessed to lay beside.
And wildlife frolic and flourish in the gardens you have created in my chest.
And we spend the days dancing
Until I feel you pull away.
And I weep.
And I curse your lunar acquaintance.
And it has been a thousand years.

Mountain

In another lifetime
I am a mountain
And you are the sun.
Each morning I boyishly wait for you to raise your head
And you do
And you cover me in your warmth
And I feel beautiful and important
And together we cast shadows like paintings
Across the willing landscapes.
And wildlife frolic and flourish
in the gardens you have created in my chest.
And we spend the days dancing
Until I feel you pull away.
And I weep.
And I curse your lunar acquaintance.
And it has been a thousand years.
